Event Report

Prof Veena provided valuable insights on how usage of a matrix helps in literature review. Using a review matrix enables you to quickly compare and contrast articles in order to determine the scope of research across time. A review matrix can help you more easily spot differences and similarities between journal articles about a research topic. She emphasized that once the scholars complete their research, they have to organize their source by date in order to make it easier to see changes over time. She provided some tips like,

Do not include column headings that are explicit in your research question. For example, if you are looking at drug use in adolescents, do not include a column heading for age of study participants. If the answer will be the same for every study, it's generally a bad choice for a column heading.

Do not try to fully complete a review matrix before reading the articles. Reading the articles is an important way to discern the nuances between studies.
