Event Report

The workshop introduced attendees to Zotero and Mendeley, two popular citation management tools. The workshop delved into the functionalities of Zotero, starting from installation and setup to advanced features. Participants were guided on how to efficiently collect, organize, and annotate sources directly from their web browser. The workshop also covered the collaborative aspects of Zotero, showcasing its ability to facilitate group projects and shared libraries. The second part of the workshop focused on Mendeley, exploring its integration with Microsoft Word for seamless citation and bibliography creation. Attendees gained insights into using Mendeley to organize, annotate documents, and collaborate within research groups. Special attention was given to Mendeley's social features, allowing researchers to discover and connect with others in their field. The workshop focused on Zotero and Mendeley's compatibility with various databases and academic publishers. Participants learned how to import citations, reduce errors, and address common challenges. Practical sessions provided tips for a streamlined citation process. The workshop resulted in increased confidence in managing references and streamlining research processes, making it a valuable resource for digital researchers.
