Rangoli Making
competition

Event Report

The rangoli-making competition was a vibrant and colorful celebration of traditional art, showcasing the creativity and precision of the participants. Competitors used a variety of materials, including colored powders, rice, and flower petals, to create intricate designs on the ground. Each rangoli was a unique work of art, displaying geometric patterns, floral motifs, and cultural symbols that paid homage to the rich heritage of the craft. The atmosphere was lively as spectators admired the beautiful designs and the artists' meticulous attention to detail. Judges had the difficult task of choosing winners based on the originality, aesthetics, and execution of each piece. The competition fostered a sense of community as participants shared techniques and appreciated each other's work. In the end, the event was a visual feast for all and a successful showcase of the traditional art form.
